

Helping and Receiving Help

“I can’t” is often a child’s cry for adult help. This is the moment when we might say to the child, “Rather than say ‘I can’t,’ say ‘I’m learning.’” This response will give the child the confidence to try once more to zip up that coat, tie that shoe, or put on those gloves. “You did it!” If after trying, the child still needs assistance, we’re there to help -- but life is even sweeter when another child chimes in to help instead!

We care for each other. We love to help and be helped by our friends.
